

I first met Yeager when his owner's (Scott) brother Rick was walking him. I notice a growth on his back left leg and inquired about it and the dog. This is when I found out that Scott had passed suddenly from complications relating to the medication given after his heart surgery. Scott was 37 and he was the accountant for their small business so not only did Rick have to take over those responsibilities but also the care of Yeager. Rick told me that his brother was in the process of getting needed medical care for Yeager when he passed. In a matter of 45 days this growth ballooned into what it was today and after seeing this thing grow so quickly I couldn't just stand by and do nothing so I took over the responsibility for Yeager in an attempt to get the lifesaving surgery he needed. I was directed to Paws 4 A Cure by a friend as a way to get some help. So along with the generous help from Paws 4 A Cure and the fund raiser site I set up we were able to take Yeager in today for his surgery a couple hours ago. I will be updating everyone as to how he is doing.
